One-hundred-and-ninety nearly uninterrupted issues of a bullfighting review, spanning from 1922 to 1926, bound in multiple volumes seperated by year (9 x 12 inches). Each issue contains around 40 to 90 pages of articles, news, and photos of everything surrounding bullfighting and its culture as well as other sports. Bullfighting has had a controversial history in Mexico, as the blood sport been banned twice in its history being criticized as uncivilized and unecessary, but at the same time has been hailed as part of Mexico's cultural patrimony by others, as Mexico boasts some of the greatest bullfighters as well as the largest bullfighting ring in the world. This tome is a piece of that controversial history in Mexico. World Cat shows holdings for issues published after 1925 in Spain and Mexico's national library as well as the University of Denver, making this a rare and fairly comprehensive set.

"Historias insólitas de la Copa América" celebrates Copa America's century of existence through a collection of stories that detail the development of the tournament over the years and magnify the most unusual episodes that have happened over the course of its history, some of which are politically incorrect -- A spectator who scored a goal, a racist Brazilian president who did not want black players in his team, and a famous striker who played with diapers and a world record of wrong penalties in a match are just a sample of the remarkable stories that comprise this new work by Luciano Wernicke. Wernicke is also the author of "Historias insólitas de los Mundiales de fútbol", "Historias insólitas de los Juegos Olímpicos", "Historias insólitas del fútbol", "Doctor y campeón", "James, nace un crack" and "Historias insólitas de la Copa Libertadores".
